The question of sclaries is discussed at length by Mr. Brown. He claims there is a great disparity of salaries in his office as compared with the characteristics.

fice as compared with the other auditin bureaus in the department. In this con-nection, Mr. Brown renews his recon-mendation for a readjustment of the salaries. He says:

Reason for Increase.

Exclusive of the auditing office for the Postoffice Department, the average To Allow Vessel to Get Out of Slip It salary is $176 less in this office than the highest, and $51 less than the lowest average in the other auditing offices. The character of the work in the auditing office of the Navy Department is such as to require a very high order of clerical ability. There is very little copying or formal work. Nearly every clerk must be an accountant, and he must also be familiar with the large volume of legislation pertaining to both the War and Navy Departments. To secure and hold such class of clerks the salaries must be high enough to compete with others of the highest grade in the auditing service.
